The competition will give designers and architects the opportunity to win thousands of dollars and exposure in the industry's leading flooring design magazine, while celebrating the integration of flooring, design and architecture. Submissions must be for design projects completed between January 1, 2007 and December 31, 2009. All entries must be received by February 19, 2009 and will be judged on the use of flooring and how it compliments the project's overall design.

Applicants are asked to submit examples of work where the floor stands out in a space's overall design in the following four categories: Large New Construction (over 20,000 sq. ft.), Large Remodel (over 20,000 sq. ft.), Small New Construction (under 20,000 sq. ft.) and Small Remodel (under 20,000 sq. ft.). All winners will be featured in the April 2010 issue of Floor Focus Magazine and on the Floor Daily website.

"I believe the most exciting element to design is the inspiration behind it," says Anthony Minite, president/CEO of Bentley Prince Street. "So, it is exciting to support a program like the Vision Awards that recognizes individuals and firms who were inspired by flooring and appreciate its role in creating beautiful interiors."

The 2010 Vision Awards is open to designers and architects who have made the floor an integral part of their overall design. All entries must be submitted with an entry form and a high-resolution photo. For an official entry form and more information visit <http://www.floorfocus.com/designaward>.
